

Online Program Courageous Conversations About Race

An online professional development program designed to help you transform the culture in your district.

Understand how race impacts your schools and classrooms

Learn how racial disparities impact students in your district and how to engage in productive and transformative conversations about race. To help you in classrooms across your district, Public Consulting Group (PCG) has partnered with renowned equity expert Glenn Singleton to bring his award-winning protocol ONLINE! Now, you can learn directly from Glenn Singleton in the new online professional development program, Courageous Conversations about Race.

Courageous Conversations™ serves as the essential strategy for school systems and other educational organizations to address racial disparities through safe, authentic, compassionate, and effective cross-racial dialogue.

“It has really opened my eyes to discrimination, mindsets, and we all need to continue working to eliminate these issues by having courageous conversations.”

– Broward County Public School Equity Liaison: Rita Rodriguez, Autism Coach

“One of the best courses I have taken. I have learned a lot.”

– Sonia Arteche MS., South Broward High School, AICE American History/AICE Business Studies

“The course introduced race and the impact of race in a sincere, transparent, and honest way, while giving the historical framework for reference. This added credibility and gave me a better understanding of my own racial relationship. The self-reflective component is also appreciated. These key reflections allowed me to think about earlier submissions, and encouraged me to continue to “evolve” (still evolving). The facilitator has been positive and encouraged our Courageous Conversations through questions in the discussion board. Lastly, the other participants have shown me how diverse our backgrounds are, yet how similar our positivity is.”

– Broward County Public School Equity Liaison: Dr. Suzanne Clarke, ASD Coach & Curriculum Support

Courageous Conversations about Race Glenn E. Singleton

The online course, Courageous Conversations About Race, was developed in partnership with Glenn Singleton, founder of Pacific Education Group (PEG). PEG is renowned for addressing systemic educational inequity by providing a framework, guidance, and support to K-12 systems and institutions of higher education focused on meeting the needs of under-served students of color. In Courageous Conversations about Race, educators gain the knowledge and skills to understand and examine the impact of race on student achievement and the role that racism plays in institutionalized racial disparities.

Educators learn a practical and accessible protocol that supports them in challenging their personal beliefs around race. By the end of this course, educators have the knowledge, skills, and practical strategies to engage in courageous conversations about race on a daily basis in both personal and professional contexts.

PCG's KDS Online Courses

At the core of many of PCG's professional learning programs are KDS online courses with virtual coaching. PCG's KDS course content is focused, sustained, and collaborative. Each course provides 45 hours of high-impact instruction, practice, and coaching to effectively increase teacher knowledge and put application into practice. Learners complete each course over 12-14 weeks, during which they receive one-on-one online coaching designed to provide personalized feedback, enhance engagement with the materials, and support learners throughout the program.
